There are, however, a few easy things you can do to minimise the risk. First off, as mentioned above, don't tell your kid the password to their Roblox account. The reason behind this is the 'free Robux' scams that proliferate the internet. These sites get your details by disguising themselves as sites that look like an official Roblox page and encourage people to log into their Roblox account via their page to claim 'free Robux'. If you do this you have just given the scammers all of the information they need to take over the account and clear it out. No matter how tempting these sites are you need to know that there is NO SUCH THING AS FREE ROBUX. Only purchase Robux using the methods mentioned before.

Design our own clothes within Roblox: similar to the above, but in this case with the distinctive fact that we will need to have a Roblox Premium subscription to be able to design and publish clothing pieces for the game's avatars online. Once in the store, we can get up to 70% of the value of each purchase once they are made.

That might have been just legal manoeuvring, but the question will eventually arise: who gets to decide what appears on the Metaverse? Given Roblox's significant audience of under-13s, the company is understandably keen on safety, employing over 3,000 people around the world to screen for inappropriate content. That is good news if you're a parent, but bad if you're a creator in a hypothetical future where a moderated Metaverse becomes the primary conduit for entertainment consumption and your work is judged sufficiently inappropriate.

Many players claim there is one free way to earn Robux and it is through a Robux Generator. However, these don't actually exist and can do more harm than good. They claim they generate you free Robux, but in reality, they are just a scam.
